"By delivering different types of housing for a range of people from different economic backgrounds means that the community is diverse and inclusive. The challenge to create sustainable homes allows for creative collaborative working."

Resident

"I feel safe in the community I live. There are lots of things to promote wellbeing, like community gardens and bike to hire to get around. The social mix is varied with lots of people from different walks of life living in the same area because of affordable and social housing."

Elected official

"The community is sustainable which has an effect on the wider issue of long-term sustainability. My voters are happy with the communal garden spaces and being able to travel around easily with bikes they can borrow. The residents feel safe and because of the healthy mix of residents from different houses, we see a diverse culture through businesses."

Business owner

"The drive to create a sustainable community is at the centre of the business in the community. Clean travel has been important to factor into how people visit the community and how that impacts the businesses."
